LOCAL MATTERS.

REVENUES.
We have outstanding, several hundred dollars yet, on subscription, which remained unpaid when we adopted the cash system. We have no doubt that our subscribers own their entire subscriptions, from the commencement of the first volume up to the last January last. We have been to the extent of sending a collector around once, and since, due to the trouble of sending out their accounts, yet we have not heard from them in any shape. We need this money very much, to meet claims that we owe, and cannot, therefore, indulge those who are indebted to us any longer. They must pay up. We hope they will comprehend this very modest hint, in the way of urging.

Dismissed on Bail.
SAMUEL BAKER, who has been in jail in Findlay, awaiting a trial on the charge of stealing, was brought before Judge Whitely, on Saturday evening last, on a writ of HABEAS CORPUS. After a hearing, the Judge refused to dismiss him from custody on this writ, but did what was equivalent—reduced the required bail from one thousand dollars to three hundred, which, being given, he was set at liberty. Considering that the Court meets in the course of about two weeks, it is difficult to understand why an effort was made to have his bail reduced to such a pittance, unless it was to enable him to make good his escape; and we are astonished that Judge WHITELY made any such grant. We have understood BAKER has stated that he had accomplished here and elsewhere. If this be the case, the forfeiture of three hundred dollars will be a trifling consideration, compared with the risk of having such facts brought to light on his trial, as would implicate them. We look upon this trivial acquittal without investigation, as trifling exceedingly with the interests of community.

Delinquent Subscribers.
We sent out this week, a collector to Van Buren, with accounts for subscriptions on the paper, amounting to between thirty and forty dollars, most of which were due from the commencement of the paper up to January last. After scouting the country over, he succeeded in finding two or three of the subscribers, most of the others having gone to parts unknown. A great portion of them are men of property, and especially of the class who are exceedingly sensitive, in regard to the cash system; and think when we require them to comply with the prepayment system, we are reflecting on their honesty, or doubting their responsibility. Our collector returned, having succeeded in obtaining the enormous sum of two dollars. Such are the fruits of the credit system.

"Don't Behave in Meeting."
The Perryburg Journal complains that one of the distinguished Democratic citizens of Findlay, while attending Court in Perryburg, did not behave himself with becoming propriety in church, in that place, and goes on to enumerate a few of the "raucous" he cut up; such as taking upon him "laffing, bubbling around" while in Church, and finally getting up and leaving abruptly before the service closed, in such a way as that he had like to have swept away "a third part" of the congregation with the ample folds of his long-tailed "Shanghai." This was really too bad, but we have this excuse to offer: the gentleman, not having been at Church before for nine or ten years, had lost the run of church decorum, and had to take as a "precedent" that of the Court of Common Pleas.

The Minister, it seems, in the course of the sermon, took occasion to speak of the evils of American slavery, and like the Indian for dealer, our local friend took that talk as specially intended for him, and immediately "sloped." Well, this is not strange, for the Democratic party, by sympathy and association, have so fully identified themselves with slavery, as to regard opposition to this institution as an insult to them.

The Laws.
We publish, this week, the Bank Law to be voted on by the people of the State, in October next. Our readers would do well to give attention to it, so that they may be able to vote understandingly. There is much need of a more efficient banking system, and if this law is calculated to meet the case, it should by all means be adopted. With this law we close the publication of the laws.

Communications.
We have not been able to accommodate all our contributors, yet. We have several communications on hand that we have been compelled to lay over. Our correspondents must prepare their productions carefully, and manage so that they do not occupy more than a column of space.

We find it impossible to revise, much less re-write, the numerous productions of this kind which we receive from time to time.

Medical Notice.

Druid Minstrels.

This troupe of minstrels performed here on last Friday evening, giving excellent satisfaction. Mr. BAKER's solo singing was admired very much. We have heard it called the best entertainment of the kind, given here for some time.

Original Poetry.

Written in a Lady's Album.

BY MRS. J. J. WISE.

GENTLE CARBIDE, may no sorrow,
Ever cloud thy fair young brow;
Happier still may each to-morrow
Find thee than the happy now.

Peace and sunshine e'er go with thee—
All that is of living worth—
Making all thy future happy,
And thy heaven begin on earth.

As friends we meet, as friends we part,
And meet perhaps on earth no more;
But friendship lives within the heart,
And growing still forevermore.

If true, God-trusting, hopes to find
In friends, whose friends are of one mind,
And all is happiness.

TO CARRIE.

A LA HIA WATKA.
Should you ask me where I got it,
I should answer, I should tell you,
I should tell you that I made it.

Now the evening sun is setting,
Calmly, beautifully setting;
Or, if I would be poetical,
As poetical as the evening,
I should say, the sun, retiring
From the busy scene and bustle
Of the day, is seeking quiet
'Neath the canopy of purple
That o'er spreads his couch of crimson.

Or, to use another figure—
Like a soldier and mighty warrior,
Fallen just when he was conquering;
Wraps his Martial-Cloak around him,
And looks back upon the varied
Scenes that float as mist behind him,
So the King of Day, the monarch
Of the Stars and of the Firmament,
Calmly sinks to rest, around him,
Drawing peacefully his mantle,
That o'er spreads his couch of crimson.

As a fond, but bashful lover
Hides his face in crimson blushes,
If his own adored Dilemma
Does but cast a smile upon him,
Or let fall a word of promise,
Yielding to his little charmer
All the right to rule and reason—
(While the busy world is dreaming)—
So the sun in crimson blushes
Hides his face, and leaves Miss Evening
Mistress of his daily empire.

Borne upon the light-winged Zephyrs,
Evening comes, a Queen, in beauty,
And in smiles, amid the grandeur
Of her simple coronation.

Mark! the weary birds are singing
Songs of love to one another,
And rejoicing at the marriage
Of proud Day and blushing Evening.
And the old oak grove is vocal
With the strains of bridal music,
And the pretty evening flowers—
Tender, lonely, blooming bride's maids—
Hang their heads in silent blushes,
As the softly breathing Zephyrs
Near the prettiest do linger—
As an old informant tells me
Lovers have an ancient custom—
Breathing sighs, and stealing kisses.

Severely rolls the murmuring streamlet,
And the tender vines and flowers
That o'erhang the rippling waters,
Sleep and kiss the trembling waters
O'er their bed of pebbles murmuring;
Drooping as upspringing tears drop
On the heaving, swelling bosom
Of the softly murmuring waters.
But a poet's thoughts will wander—
(Who would have a poet's thought?)
And I've been out on an excursion
Not when I began intended.
And the evening shadows closing
Round me, bid me cease my raving,
Hang my lyre against the side-wall,
And foregoing poet-rambler,
Yield to rest, and love, and CARE,
So, good night—Yours,
June 10th, 1857. FULCRUSTAL.

A BITTER PILL.

"I had to Swallow it and so May You."

To those indebted I would say—during my absence was I agreed to pay for collections rather than put you to costs. The result of my forbearance to you, has caused me to be sued—
and I am now compelled to pay costs and interest and you are the cause of it. Now, if others push me because you won't pay, don't blame me if I resort to the same rule. P. D. ARDINGER.
